TRUSTEE EXCULPATION WITH RESPECT TO LIFE INSURANCE By: Trent S. Kiziah

Thirteen states have enacted statutes which exculpate a trustee from any losses sustained with respect to life insurance held by the trustee. These charts analyze these thirteen statutes giving particular interest to the duties that the statutes waive, whether notice must be given before exculpation occurs, on whose life the life insurance policy can cover and their effective date provisions. See Trent S. Kiziah, "Statutory Exculpation of Trustees Holding Life Insurance Policies," 47 Real Property, Trust & Estate Law Journal 328 (2012) for more information concerning dates of enactment, legislative history and a critique of the statutes.

*Notice is required if the trust was established before a certain date.

^Florida's statute provides coverage for life insurance on a "qualified person" defined as "a person who is insured or a proposed insured, or the spouse of that person, who has provided the trustee with funds used to acquire or pay premiums with respect to a policy of insurance on the life of that person or the spouse of that person, or on the lives of that person and the spouse of that person."

^oStatute covers life insurance on the "life of the settlor, or the lives of the settlor and the settlor's spouse." A policy solely on the settlor's spouse is not clearly covered.

^[1] A "yes" in this column means the trustee is relieved of investment duties with respect to life insurance held by the trustee.

A "no" means the trustee is not relieved of the investment duties with respect to the life insurance policy. Note: The trustee may have investment duties but exculpated from failure to fulfill those duties. See column "Exculpates".

^[2] A "yes" in this column means the statute expressly exculpates the trustee from any loss arising with respect to life insurance held by the trustee.

^[3] Ten states place no limitations on how the policy is acquired.

^[4] Alabama's statute is limited to policies contributed by the settlor or purchased by the trustee upon settlor's request. Provided the acquisition limitation is met, a policy on any person is permitted.

^[5] North Dakota's statute is limited to policies contributed to the trust by any party, other than the trustee, and policies acquired by the trustee which before the acquistion of the policy, the trustee never owned a policy.

^[6] South Carolina's statute addresses acquisition of the policy. It does not specifically address retention.

^[7] Virginia's statute applies to policies "acquired by gift or pursuant to an express permission or direction in the governing instrument." Provided this acquisition limitation is met, a policy on any person is permitted.
